Romeoville Exhibits a New Business in Town

The Village of Romeoville welcomed another new business today: Metro Exhibit Corporation. For over 30 years, Metro Exhibit has worked with companies large and small to help bring branding and messaging to life.

“Welcoming a new business to our community is always exciting,” said Mayor Noak. “It’s even better when that business is as unique as Metro Exhibit. Investing in new real estate has always been a tell-tale sign of a growing business and that’s just what MEC has done by purchasing a building and moving their corporate headquarters into the new space at 1308 Marquette Drive.”

Brian Phebus, MEC’s owner, and Tom Bacha, MEC’s President, could not be more excited to show it off. “Buying the building is part of our long term investment plan,” said Phebus. “The entire company is energized. The best way to predict the future is to create it – and that’s what we plan on doing.”

Metro Exhibit Corporation has worked with businesses ranging from Fortune 500 companies to small start-ups. They provide one stop services for trade shows, from logistics planning to on site supervision. Be it events, museum installations, trade shows, custom or rental exhibits, or program management, Metro Exhibit can handle it.
